

Figure 1. Schematic representation of the experimental design. The subjects were divided into two groups: the control group (CG) and the experimental group (EG). The CG was divided into two subgroups: the control group (CG) and the control group (CG). The EG was divided into two subgroups: the experimental group (EG) and the experimental group (EG). The subjects were divided into two groups: the control group (CG) and the experimental group (EG). The CG was divided into two subgroups: the control group (CG) and the control group (CG). The EG was divided into two subgroups: the experimental group (EG) and the experimental group (EG).

Директор

“The only interesting thing about the hypothesis that the human brain is a computer is that it is wrong.”

10.04.2025

Анастасія Кузьменко

(continued)

Анастасія Кузьменко

[illegible]

српном на 10.04.2025

Додаток 8

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

Директор

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO PRESS

10.04.2025

Анастасія Кузьменко

Q. 14. What is the difference between a proposition and a statement?

Анастасія Кузьменко

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO